Individual, different, myself have an identity, or need one have a mind, that I know.
I am me, nobody else.
wonder why I'm here,
what purpose to life
God and Country,
peace now and forever
I don't know, who can say?
thousands of problems, none too big.
got a mind, why not use it?
got a voice, use it too.
life is changing, in the middle.
do it now, while I can.
may not agree, that's my right inside or out, all the same with them, they're against you against them, they're against you still.
makes no sense, never will.
another phase of evolution,
story of man
from the sea—to what?
someday we'll know,
not this week, or the next.
caught up in change, swept away
for the better, gotta find out not much choice, couldn't be worse.
lost in thought, lost in life, just lost.
sometimes wondering, a little confused why me, why now, why here, why not?
man's improved, why not prove it could stop death, that'd be nice.
the time is now, like never before we're the leaders, got to be ever constant like the sea,
changing with the wind,
just another strong wind, be gone soon life will struggle on, always has.
got little choice, only two ways
our way or the wrong way,
or are we right.
history will tell, we'll never know
got to do it though, this I know.

Student Organizations

Thousands of problems
but none too big.
At least they're small
when identified
and tackled by more than one.
That's the whole idea.
For some, the search for identity
has ended in brotherhood—
not in isolation.
The purpose of organizations
is more easily stated than fulfilled.
For, like its members,
a purpose evolves into purposes.
But in the process,
its members find unity.
Several minds are better than one.
There's strength in combined voices.
But the potential of the individual must not be underestimated.
Each single contribution lends prosperity
to the combined effort.

The wind blows cold in New York; so many faces . . . no one knows each other no one knows Charlie, the house drunk. He falls off of his bar stool three or four times a night. No one bothers to pick him up. No one knows Lisa, the three dollar hooker. She talks to herself. No one knows Frank the junkie. All there in a sea of long dead dreams waiting for the next drink. Waiting for the next trick. Waiting for the next hit. Waiting. Faces here are so full of hope. Some will make the journey to meet Charlie and Lisa and Frank and some will not.

Some will quit, some will fail. Some will win, some will lose. Some will laugh, some will cry. And all are brought together by the common knowledge of a simple fact. Fat city today, working in a supermarket tomorrow. The high buildings and the freezing pavements. The set stone eyes of strangers. The wind blows cold in New York.

He appreciates literature and poetry Charts a future course in medicine Realizes that not only has man survived, then succumbed, then survived again, but also that man continues to rise from his own ashes, time after time.
Probes other men's thoughts, and records
some on paper for posterity.
Links the composition of DNA with the substance of life.
Calculates the success of man by multiplying his orbits of the moon Perceives what two plus two equals—unless . . .
Speaks another man's language and penetrates a barrier Interacts with his brothers to widen the path slightly more than before.

KATHY HUTCHERSON

Learning to do things, reaching out for guidance, help.
An injured hand, a torn ligament,
a broken leg—plaster casts, splints,
crutches, wheel chairs Being helped, being shown how,
re-adjusting, accepting Learning and seeing a feeling, a sensation
Communication between the helper and the helped
the road to better health—normalcy.

PEGGY AUDERS

Life's pushing and moving creates communities punctured with human vacuums.
A discorded family,
an unhappy child,
a lonely aged, a crippled teen learn
to constructively and enjoyably
use the talents of their lives.
Scarce words, touches,
interested advice,
all necessary to piece together
a disordered puzzle.

WALL ST.

The saga of capitalism—
Competition is a way of life defined in dollars and cents.
Ideas shaped into material goods.
Dog eat dog, or cat or anything else that stands in its way.
Challenging in more ways than one where men can be lost or found.
Complex, complicated, but effective.
The result of years of practice.
